DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

(e) the invention was described in a patent granted on an application for patent by another filed in the United States before the invention thereof by the applicant for patent, or on an international application by another who has fulfilled the requirements of paragraphs (1), (2), and (4) of section 371(c) of this title before the invention thereof by the applicant for patent.

The changes made to 35 U.S.C. 102(e) by the American Inventors Protection Act of 1999 (AIPA) and the Intellectual Property and High Technology Technical Amendments Act of 2002 do not apply when the reference is a U.S. patent resulting directly or indirectly from an international application filed before November 29, 2000. Therefore, the prior art date of the reference is determined under 35 U.S.C. 102(e) prior to the amendment by the AIPA (pre-AIPA 35 U.S.C. 102(e)).

Claims 1-9 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by Jarvik (5,376,114). Jarvik discloses a cannula pump for use in temporary cardiac support methods. The device has a cannula or conduit (20) having a preformed curve and a pump disposed within the conduit. Jarvik also discloses that the pump has a motor that may have its rotation controlled by a magnet (col. 8) or by a motor controller and power source (col. 10). Since no explicit structure is claimed, the magnet or motor controller are seen to be equivalent to applicant's control circuit. With respect to the limitations of the placement of the conduit in various locations of the heart, they are functional recitations of using the device. The functional recitations have not been given patentable weight because it is in narrative form. In order to be given patentable weight, a functional recitation must be expressed as a "means" for performing the specified function, as set forth in 35 USC § 112, 6th paragraph, and must be supported by recitation in the claim of sufficient structure to warrant the presence of the functional language. In re Fuller

Claims 1-10 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(e) as being anticipated by Aboul-Hosn (6,083,260). Aboul-Hosn discloses a cannula pump having an inner (20) and an outer (30+40) conduits with a pump (50) disposed within the conduits. The device cannula portion (20) has a preformed curve. Aboul-Hosn further teaches that the pump has a drive unit (80) to control the pump's speed. Since no explicit structure is claimed, the drive unit is seen to be equivalent to applicant's control circuit. With respect to the limitations of the placement of the conduit in various locations of the heart, they are functional recitations of using the device. The functional recitations have not been given patentable weight because it is in narrative form. In order to be given patentable weight, a functional recitation must be expressed as a "means" for performing the specified function, as set forth in 35 USC § 112, 6th paragraph, and must be supported by recitation in the claim of sufficient structure to warrant the presence of the functional language. In re Fuller

Conclusion

The prior art made of record and not relied upon is considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure. Cho (6,186,981) discloses a cavo-atrial cannula having a preformed curved tip for use in venous drainage. Aboul-Hosn et al. (6,395,026) discloses an apparatus and method for using a pump and cannula system in cardiopulmonary bypass.
